INTRODUCTION

Ho Chi Minh (1890-1969) - is not only a representative thinker, revolutionary, writer, poet, patriot, etc., of the Vietnamese nation in the early modern period, but also internationally honored as a “hero of national liberation, world cultural celebrity”. During his revolutionary life, he left humanity with many valuable thoughts. Especially, one of the important contents in that ideological system is education. Because through this thought, Ho Chi Minh pointed out a very important method to solve the requirements of Vietnam’s historical - social reality at the end of the 19th century and the beginning of the 20th century, which was the liberation of nation, country, people; That thought was creatively inherited from the Vietnamese cultural tradition with the absorption of Eastern and Western philosophies in history, and was fundamentally transformed by the worldview and methodology of Marxism - Leninism; Through lively and rich revolutionary activities, Ho Chi Minh introduced a new practical and profound perspective on education and made it lively, practical, close to life, at the same time, have profound general meaning, the theory of comprehensive human education and training. The UNESCO Resolution assessed: “The important and many-sided contributions of President Ho Chi Minh to the fields of culture, education and the arts crystalizes the cultural tradition of the Vietnamese people which stretches back several thousand years and his ideals embody the aspirations of peoples in the affirmation of their cultural identity and the promotion of mutual understanding” (Many authors, 2002, p.5). That depth, comprehensiveness and specialty in the view of education are expressed by Ho Chi Minh through the following contents:

PROBLEM SOLVING

The first, regarding the purpose of education, Ho Chi Minh assumed that education had to pay attention to the constant goal of “Learning to work, to be a human, and to be an official. Learning to serve our union, the class and the people, our motherland and humanity” (Ho Chi Minh, 2000, vol. 5, p.1365). Therefore, education is not simply a cultural education, but also a practice of human skills and morality. The education must be towards “primarily teaching students to love the country and the people, teaching students to be independent, self-reliant, not to be inferior to anyone, not to be slaves” (Ho Chi Minh, 2000, volume 5, p.339).

Ho Chi Minh pointed out the prerequisite task that the new education needs to “train the students to be useful citizens for Vietnam, an education that fully develops the available capacities of the students.” (Ho Chi Minh, 2000, vol. 4, p.32), helping people to be self-aware of their rights, values, and strength in order to liberate themselves, towards achieving national independence against recognizing that situation, President Ho Chi Minh paid great attention to education, he assumed that “killing the ignorance” is not less important than “killing foreign invaders”, “Now we have gain independence. One of the works that must be done urgently at this time is to raise the people’s intellectual level” (Ho Chi Minh, 2000, vol. 4, p.36).

The fourth, regarding the content of human education, Ho Chi Minh assumed that educational content must meet the requirements of comprehensive human development to have persons who possess both political integrity and professional competence, both talent and virtue. In which, political integrity includes morality, the love for the motherland, the determination to serve the people and country for all the life; professional competence includes the level of education, science, technology and military, etc. The dialectical relationship between political integrity and professional competence is the relationship between virtue and talent, with virtue being revolutionary morality. Ho Chi Minh once said:

“There are many comrades who either consider themselves to have a high cognitive level and full working experience - or do not have a progressive spirit, they play it by ear, so they refuse to study, they do not make self-criticism to correct mistakes and make up for shortcomings.” (Ho Chi Minh, 2000, vol. 4, p.26);

Therefore, officials must constantly improve both professional and ethical qualifications.

Ho Chi Minh always emphasized that “a person with talent but without virtue is useless, a person with virtue but without talent will meet difficulties in doing anything”. That is not wrong, a talented person needs to have virtue and enthusiasm in the profession to be successful and be loved by many people. When a person does something with his enthusiasm, he does everything easier and feels his work more meaningful. Talented and virtuous people are loved by everyone everywhere, their work is more convenient, and they always seem to have the spirit of learning and improving their knowledge.

“All of you here will be officials. Therefore, it is necessary for you to remember the qualities that an official should have:
1) Not be proud, not be a “mandarin in revolution”
2) Be diligent: diligent in listening, diligent in observing, diligent in missioning, diligent in thinking, diligent in speaking, diligent in doing.
3) Always have progressive spirit, never stop studying, self-training, correcting shortcomings.
4) Be loyal to the revolutionary purpose: to keep the country independent and the people free” (Ho Chi Minh, 2000, vol. 5, p.331).

In addition, Ho Chi Minh also emphasized the education of lifestyle, he said that the establishment of people’s cultured lives with civilized way of living, new way of life practice is based on the inheritance of national quintessence, therefore, he called on each class and individual in society to implement a new life, eliminate the remnants of old society He wrote:

“At this time, it is necessary for us to practice the new life of Laboriousness, Thriftiness, Honesty, Integrity.

The army must diligently practice and fight, the people increase production and work diligently, the resistance against foreign aggression will surely win. Therefore, we should implement the laboriousness.

Soldiers have to save ammunition with the motto of one bullet for one enemy. People have to save materials to help soldiers and evacuated people. Therefore, we should implement the thriftiness.

Everyone is chaste, not greedy, does not use public properties for private objectives, then everything will be done well. Therefore, everyone should implement honesty.

Every citizen must sacrifice his own interests for the sake of the country, enthusiastically support the resistance against foreign aggression, strive to increase production, eliminate those who betray the country and harm the people, to make our motherland unified and independent. That is Integrity. We can see that the new life is suitable to the times” (Ho Chi Minh, 2000, vol. 4, p.31).

In life, people have different lifestyles and ways of living. However, the difficult thing is how to live rightly. He wrote:

“Children must be obedient, at home, you must listen to your parents, at school, you must be diligent; with your friends, you must be respectful” (Ho Chi Minh, 2000, vol. 4, p.31).

In the coming school year, you should study hard, be obedient, obey your teachers, love your friends” (Ho Chi Minh, 2000, volume 4, p.32).

The fifth, in terms of education methods, Ho Chi Minh assumed that to educate people, it is necessary to combine many different methods to suit conditions, environment, and towards object to achieve educational goals. In the difficult situation of the country, he said:

“Those who are already literate should teach those who are not, you should contribute to the Vietnamese antiilliteracy campaign, as for six or seven years, you have started a movement to spread the national language and help the illiterate.

Those who are not literate should try your best to learn. If the wife is not literate, the husband will teach, if the younger brother is not literate, the older brother will teach, if the parents are not literate, the children will teach, if the servants are not literate, the owner will teach, the rich organize classes at their homes to teach the neighboring illiterate, the owners of hamlets, plantations, mines and factories open classes for their tenants and workers” (Ho Chi Minh, 2000, vol. 4, p.38-39).

Besides, he is very interested in two very important objects of teaching and learning activities, they are teachers and students. In particular, for teachers, besides imparting knowledge, they must always exchange knowledge and experiences with each other during the process of teaching and working and need to choose the appropriate communication method for each object. He wrote:

“Teachers have to find how to teach and what to teach, so that students can understand quickly, remember for a long time, and progress quickly” (Ho Chi Minh, 2000, volume 8, p.138). “Teach gradually from less to more, from easy to difficult, from low to high. Be not greedy to teach much, not indoctrinated. Teach in a practical way. Theory is closely linked to practice” (Ho Chi Minh, 2000, vol. 7, p.273);

For learners, it is necessary to work hard and be diligent in studying, Ho Chi Minh wrote:

Must study hard and try to do 5 things: ARDENCY, SATISFACTION, PHILANTHROPY, SOLIDARITY, DISCIPLINE” (Ho Chi Minh, 2000, volume 4, p.886).

In addition, Ho Chi Minh also pointed out the very important role of the educational environment, he stated the relationship between education in school and education at home. Both the family and the school must have a close relationship with each other in the education of their children. Thereby creating a healthy, democratic and civilized educational environment, creating the most favorable conditions for education and learning. He wrote:

“In the school, there should have democracy. For all issues, teachers and students discuss together, anyone who has opinions should honestly express them. For unclear issue, it should be asked and discussed for clarity. However, democracy means that students must respect teachers, teachers must respect students, not “dogs of the same street bark alike”. At the same time, teachers and students need to help servers in school. The staff should compete for healthy and delicious meals so that the students can eat well and study well.

School should keep close contact with the student’s family, because education in school is only a part, there is also a need for education in society and in the family to make education in school better. Although education in school is good, without education in the family and in society, the results are not complete” (Ho Chi Minh, 2000, vol. 8, p.395).

Besides studying, it is also necessary to organize entertainment activities to rest and relax after stressful studying hours.

“Schools, families and youth organizations must closely connect in the education of young people. Young people must focus on studying and working, and also need time for entertainment.” (Ho Chi Minh, 2000, vol. 7, p.456).

CONCLUSION

The meaning of Ho Chi Minh’s ideology on education and training of Vietnamese people today, Ho Chi Minh’s ideology on education and training is always revolutionary, scientific, simple, practical and lively. Therefore, the application of Ho Chi Minh's ideology to the current educational situation in our country has a great theoretical and practical significance in the cause of educational innovation and development.

The first practical and profound meaning in Ho Chi Minh’s ideology on building new people is the viewpoint and purpose of human building. That purpose, according to Ho Chi Minh, is to train people to serve the country, class and nation. Those are comprehensive people who are both “political integrity” and “professional competence”. In the current conditions, building new people is an urgent issue. Therefore, the Communist Party of Vietnam affirmed that human resources are the basic factor of rapid and sustainable development in the process of industrialization and modernization of the country. In the process of industrialization and modernization, it is necessary to have human resources that are sufficient in quantity, strong in quality. They are personnel with sufficient knowledge and having the ability to use advanced science and technology of the times; understanding social sciences and humanities, grasping the context of the times to constantly progress, having good health and loving labor, studying diligently to get advance, so it is necessary to “Build Vietnamese people to develop comprehensively, with good health, capacity and qualifications, and having a high responsibility for themselves, their families, society and the motherland. We should promote the development of human resources, especially high-quality human resources, to meet the requirements of the Fourth Industrial Revolution and international integration” (Document XIII, 2021, volume 1; p.231).

In order to effectively implement the strategy of education and training of new people with comprehensive development, we need a scientific education method. Therefore, our Party has stated:

It is necessary to “renovate educational thought in a consistent manner, from program objectives, content of methods to organizational structure and system, and management mechanism to create a fundamental and comprehensive change of education of our country, approaching the regional and world level, overcoming patchwork innovation which lacks of overall vision and synchronous plan. We should strive to build a modern education, of the people, by the people and for the people, ensuring equality of learning opportunities for everyone, creating conditions for the society to learn and learn all the life, and meeting the requirements of industrialization and modernization of the country” (Communist Party of Vietnam, 2006, p.206).
Therefore, the second valuable theoretical and practical lesson of Ho Chi Minh’s educational ideology for the development of education in our country today is the application of human education methods outlined by Ho Chi Minh. His education methods are traditional, modern, systematic, specific, vivid, practical, revolutionary and scientific, close, imbued with Eastern philosophy of action, so they are always associated with life, bringing the breath of life and modernity. In particular, there are education methods such as dialogue between teachers and students, learner-centered approach, linking Vietnamese education through the revolutionary periods. They are also lessons and practical educational experiences, which are very specific, vivid, realistic and effective for each person directly working the education activities in particular and the education sector in general.

In summary, Ho Chi Minh’s human education ideology is a valuable legacy, which has profound theoretical and practical significance throughout the Vietnamese revolution, it has lighted the way for the struggle to achieve victory. It is the great spiritual property of our Party and people. Under the leadership of the Communist Party of Vietnam, founded and trained by President Ho Chi Minh, the Vietnamese people stood up for independence, freedom, national reunification, and we have built the education and training, and have developed people of the new society - socialism. In the training of human resources and building new people for the industrialization of our country today, we should implement the goal of “rich people, strong country, fair and civilized society”, that ideology of Ho Chi Minh has increasingly practical meaning.
